Teaching A Culture Of Non-Violence

The Humane Education Trust, better known simply as Humane Education, is committed to promoting values in education through literacy and Life Skills / Life Orientation. By rekindling the spirit of care and respect for life, learners find a new sense of self-esteem and confidence. They begin to understand that only through their own individual actions can they begin to lay claim to their constitutional right to human dignity.

Rekindling the spirit of care and respect for life.

- We publish and produce a range of books, DVDs, posters and other classroom resources that promote positive relationships with all the inhabitants of our planet.
- Three of our titles have been chosen for the Western Cape Education Department's 100 Books in Every Grade Project and our resources are used in schools throughout South Africa.
- We assist Life Skills/Life Orientation educators in teaching Humane Education through our workshops.

Humane Education Reader: Magnificent Boy and the Spirit of the Grey Hare

Read this excerpt from Humane Education's reader Magnificent Boy.

One day, three bigger boys walked past Spook Tree on their way across the veld to a one-man general store that had recently set up business. Boetie had made a flower box out of a few scrap planks and he intended giving it to Oupa for his birthday. His teacher had given him a paint brush and a half-cup of powdered red paint to take home with him so that he could paint the flower box for Oupa. Boetie mixed the paint with water in a jar and he sat at Spook Tree, painting Oupa's gift-to-be, while the goats browsed. Boy sat a few paces away, paws out front, tongue lolling out of his smiling mouth, keenly watching Boetie's every move.

"Hey, Boetie, what are you doing?" shouted one of the boys. Boetie kept his head down. He knew the boys from school, although they were in a higher class. He knew the biggest one was called Pietman.

"Where're your shoes," shouted another boy. "Haven't you got money for shoes?" The boys sniggered among themselves. Boetie stared steadfastly at the ground.

"Where's your mother?" jeered the third boy. "Haven't you got a mother? Maybe she ran away from you."

The first boy picked up a large stone. "Mind," he yelled at Boetie, "it's a bomb!"

The intruders whooped in glee as the big stone landed right on target, smashing onto the jar of paint, splattering red splotches in every direction. Boetie kept his head down. The second boy picked up a smaller stone.

"Watch out Boetie. The next bomb's going to blow you up!" he yelled. With perfect aim, the stone zapped Boetie right on the top of his head. He clenched his teeth and swallowed his cry of pain. Up till this point Boy had been puzzled by the aggression of the intruders. But now, he leaped to his feet, the hackles on

The Great Cage Escape

Title: The Great Cage Escape
Author: Louise van der Merwe
Learning Area: Literacy, Languages, Life Orientation
Grades: 4 - 7
Language: English
Type of Resource: Fiction
Description: Short novel. Colour illustrations.

The birds in a pet shop think they are happy until a brown box punched full of air holes is left overnight on their front door step. The creature inside looks very weird at first. But as his feathers begin to grow, his true identity becomes apparent, and the stories he tells inspire the pet shop birds to pull off a Great Cage Escape. This is a story that encourages respect for all forms of life and helps learners realise that heaven can be right here on earth if we choose to make it so.

Inside the book

"Mr O slipped his hand into the mitt, reached inside the box and pulled out a creature like nothing we had seen before. He placed it quickly into a big bird cage and shut the door.

"What is it?" asked Becca.

"Well, it's got a big beak and two big bird-like feet," observed Mr O. "But no feathers," mused the girl. "Just a wrinkly crinkly pink skin with little spikes sticking out, like a hedgehog or a porcupine."

A battery hen is rescued, and finds care, respect and the ability to be what she is – a chicken. Creates awareness of the sentience of animals. Empowers learners to make a difference as consumers.

Inside the book.

*"I looked again at the soil.
Nearby it looked softer.
More powdery. I was fascinated.
I longed to go and wallow in it.
But how was I to get there?
Clambering, I knew. Pushing and shoving and pecking, I knew. But walking forwards is something I hadn't tried in all my time in the battery. First I lifted one leg, and put it down. Then I lifted the other. But both legs just came down in the same spot as before."*

Farm Animals and Us

Title: Farm Animals and Us

Authors: Compassion in World Farming (UK)
Learning Area Natural Sciences, Economic and Management Sciences, Life Orientation

Grades: 8 - 12

Language: English

Type of Resource: Multimedia DVD

Description: DVD/Video - 25 minutes – With increasing concern about the way our food is produced, this resource builds awareness, increases understanding and promotes discussion and debate about farmed animal welfare.

The Farm Animals and Us films (updated 2014) make a reasoned case for higher welfare farming whilst leaving the students open to consider personal consumer choices. Issues around the selective breeding and human food chains are covered. The films are designed to provoke thought and discussions are guaranteed to hold interest and attention!

Farm Animals and Us (17 minutes) is aimed at students aged 10 - 15 but teachers assure us that it works for older audiences where a shorter and less detailed film is required.

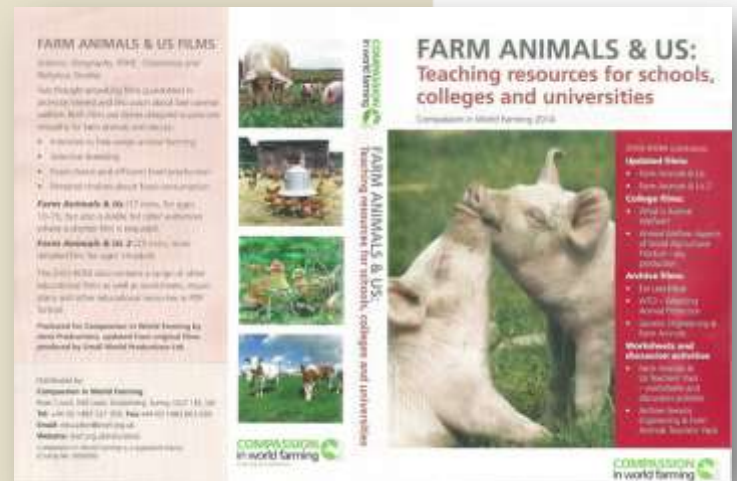

Farm Animals and Us 2 (25 minutes) covers the issues in more detail for ages 14 to adult (including college and university audiences). We suggest audiences should be advised that the films include scenes of animal confinement and separation of young from their mothers which some will find distressing. The longer film for older audiences also contains brief footage of piglet tail-docking.

Many students prefer not to join in the whole group discussion but are happy to talk in small groups. The worksheets and discussion activities are designed to encourage balanced small group discussions and self-analysis whilst teaching about farming using more concrete examples.

College films

The DVD-ROM also contains college films for those studying animal welfare in more details - What is Animal Welfare (6 minutes - 2013) and Animal welfare aspects of good agriculture practice - pig production (25 minutes - 2006)

New

Archive films

We also include 3 archive films for students aged 14 and over which are widely used to promote discussion about animal welfare, sustainability, and the ethical implications of science.

Eat Less Meat (17 minutes- 2004) WTO - Wrecking Animal Protection (11 Minutes - 2002) and Genetic Engineering and Farm Animals (19 minutes - 1997)

Again, we recommend preparing audiences for any distressing content (for example, the WTO film contains scenes of animal slaughter and trapping). Archive worksheets on genetic engineering are provided in PDF format.
